MAIN INSIDE HEADING

When did the US first become involved with Afghanistan?

- As a Cold War ally, Vice President Richard Nixon visits the strategically important Afghanistan in 1953, and President Eisenhower visits in 1959.
- From the 1950"s-70"s, the U.S. extends economic development assistance to Afghanistan to assure its allegiance vis-à-vis the USSR.
- After a coup in 1973 brings in a moderate, secular government friendly to the Soviets, U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger begins support for Muslim extremists to attack in Afghanistan via Pakistan and Iran, who under the Shah, was an ally of the U.S. America sells weapons systems to Iran.
- July 1979 President Carter signs the first directive for secret, non-lethal aid to the opponents of the pro-Soviet regime in Kabul. (The USSR invades Afghanistan to aid the regime in Dec. 1980).
- 1980"s under Ronald Reagan, CIA's "Operation Cyclone" arms, trains and builds the Mujahideen with the military of Pakistan, in order to fight the government and Soviet forces.

WHO ARE THE TALIBAN?

Taliban means "students" in Pashto.

They are an ethnic group that makes up 40 percent of the country, mainly in SE Afghanistan.

During the 1990s, the Taliban were orphans of the Russian war and had grown up in mudras that bred Islamic Fundamentalists.

Today, those who join the Taliban are poor famers and herders. Many join for money and to avenge loved ones killed in the war.

Sharia law, similar in Saudi Arabia, requires obedience to fundamentalist Islam. Females cannot get an education, are made to cover their entire bodies, bans music and TV. Harshly punishes disobedience.
